SUMMER WRITING CAMP for students entering grades 7-9

Students in this open-ended workshop will meet eight times to work on poetry, personal narrative, fantasy, essays, and any other piece of writing they wish. Writers will be heavily engaged in peer critiques, feedback, and revision.

The camp’s overall goal is to help keep teens and pre-teens engaged with the writing process so they are better prepared to utilize their creative skills through junior high, high school and beyond.

SUMMER WRITING CAMP for students entering grades 5-6

Young writers will work from a series of prompts to generate new pieces (poems, stories, essays, etc.), and will also be able to work with pieces they’ve already started. Students will have an opportunity to explore more in-depth critiquing, workshopping and revision, while also following their own creative thoughts.

The goal of the workshop is for students to grow more confident in their own creative talents and writing ability, regardless of the type of writing they’ll be asked to do in middle school and beyond.
